What We Did

To better understand the housing needs of the Métis community within Alberta, an assessment survey was conducted, and the results are highlighted below.

Through various collection strategies, 1068 Métis Albertans responded to the survey. Email, social media, and website campaigns, internal stakeholder interviews, and secondary research relating to homelessness contributed to the findings.

Through the guidance of the Métis Housing Technical Working Group, the Housing Needs Assessment Report was separated into five dimensions: Affordability, Adequacy, Suitability, Satisfaction, and Hidden Homelessness.

To establish program recommendations, each dimension was analyzed and informed by Gender Based Analysis Plus (GBA+) factors: Gender, Presence of a Disability, Household Income, Urban or Rural, Region, and Parental Status. The GBA+ approach assesses diverse groups of women, men, and gender diverse people, and how they experience policies, programs, and initiatives. Whether the respondent rents or owns is impactful and applied to each GBA+ factor.

What We Learned

Current Housing Program Participation

- ∞ Most utilized: Rental Supplement Program (50%) and Home Repair Program (32%)
- ∞ Urban participation (75.4%) significantly higher than rural (24.6%)
- ∞ Single mother participation rates (81.1%) are ~4x higher than single father (18.9%)
- ∞ Lack of housing program participation: unawareness (49.5%), accessing or filling in forms (17.2%), providing required information (8.5%)
- ∞ Program participation is inversely correlated to income – 36.6% of respondents earn <$50,000/yr

* percentage values reflect survey responses, not actual program participation.

There is a proven link between housing, culture, health, and education, which in turn, is a determinant of income. Additionally, there is a strong connection between housing, entrepreneurship, and economic development.

Overall, homeowners are in a better position than renters and have a greater rate of affordability, adequate living conditions, suitable accommodations, and satisfaction across the board. Further, people with disabilities rate higher in most categories, including unaffordability, inadequate housing, suitability, and satisfaction.

Métis Housing Access Pathway

The pathway is designed, and many of the programs can be combined to build a housing continuum that results in home ownership.

What's Next
